People called us a political band for so long just because we're queer and femme representing. None of our songs were ever political, but since we've been titled it for so long, we thought "why not give them what they asked for?" So we figured, we would.

in Holloway, Archway, King's Cross and Waterloo. Two of the houses, one by local heavies, and others were burnt out. Our homes were all destroyed and most of the people left once to the extent that this has happened in our homes have been razed (at least thirty). In some cases, we've lived in locked doors (on or off) and entering the very same that we've lived in or prostitution. On charges. Many of our time in prison.

war is not healthy for children and other living things

They said that they would feed us. You were guaranteed at least one good meal a day and it turned out they had gotten a donation of like 3 or 4 thousand packets of turkey dogs. So you would all descend on this town and go to some poor motherfucker's house who said you could stay there -- in the middle of, like, Buttfuck, Ohio. All at once, these two or three buses and our van would pull up in this usually suburban neighborhood where some kid lived. And all of these monsters would start getting out... mohawks, hippies, dogs, babies who shit in their pants, disgruntled people. The Crucifucks, DRI, MDC, Crucifix, a bunch of hippies and the Dicks. And they'd go in and throw on this huge pot of boiling water and have thousands of these turkey dogs. I haven't eaten meat for ten years -- I don't preach about it, I don't care what people eat -- but I don't know what the vegetarians were doing back then. Then there was a huge discussion, one day, because people didn't want to help clean up and they felt it was their right to not clean up if they didn't want to.

SV: That's anarchy, you know!

Gary: Well, that's exactly what their argument was. And I was holding up a huge picture of Stalin going, "You kids clean up or we're going to kill you." It was just unbelievable. Thank god for the Crucifucks.

His anger hasn't evaporated completely. At his gig, I noticed he had a Palestinian flag on display, though he made no mention of it during the performance. When I bring it up, he's more than happy to talk. "Am I against genocides and ethnic cleansing? Yes, I am, funnily enough," he says. "I can't understand why more people aren't up in arms about what's going on. We should be ashamed of ourselves, I think."
